The best way to avoid problems with FOG [voice talent: 'fog'] (fats, oils, and grease) is to keep the material out of the plumbing systems. Associates should use dry cleanup methods to remove fats, oils, and grease from surfaces before washing with water. Wet methods typically wash the water and waste materials into drains, where it eventually collects in drainage pipes. You should remove fats, oils, grease, and food waste from dishes utensils, and cooking surfaces by scraping or wiping, rather than washing with water.
